CHAMPAGNE

For centuries the Champagne region of northern France has set the global standard for premium sparkling wine. Refined and elegant, champagne can be produced from both white (Chardonnay) and red (Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier) grapes grown in prized chalky soils. The iconic Champagne houses, often based in the cities of Reims and Épernay, produce a dazzling array of sparklers to suit different foods and moods. By combining multiple vintages, they create balanced, harmonious blends (or cuvées) that demonstrate a house style. In the very best years, the wines are made and released as single vintage expressions. Vintage champagnes are often aged much longer gaining complexity and nuance. By law, all champagne must be fermented in the same bottle it is ultimately sold in: a time-consuming but crucial process for quality.

ROSÉ CHAMPAGNE

Rosé champagne achieves its brilliant color and remarkable flavors from a small addition of red wine to classic champagne blends. Those houses that offer a rosé expression take great care to craft complex, flavorful wines that invariably command a higher premium. Rarity and prestige aside, rosé champagne offers an unforgettable drinking experience. In addition to the chalky minerality and rich, toasty notes of traditional champagnes, these glorious pink elixirs introduce notes of Bing cherry, wild raspberry and rose.

SPARKLING WINES

Whether dry or sweet, white or pink, semi-sparkling or fully effervescent, quality sparkling wine is today produced all over the world. In California, many winemakers replicate the Champagne style using Chardonnay and Pinot Noir grapes to craft Brut expressions with a signature toastiness. Italy's Prosecco is loved the world over for its fruity charm and thirst-quenching drinkability. Franciacorta is Italy's much smaller but more ambitious region for sparklers. These wines are rich with complex flavors and a fine bead. Italian Moscato (white) and Brachetto (red) are usually semi-sparkling, joyfully sweet and bursting with fruit flavor.

WHITE WINES - FRANCE

LOIRE VALLEY

The Loire Valley is affectionately referred to as "The Garden of France." Though a good deal of red and rosé wine is produced here, it is the white wines that have captured the hearts of wine lovers the world over. Dry and fresh, Muscadet (not to be mistaken with fruity Muscat/Moscato) is perfectly matched with seafood, salads and summer afternoons. Sancerre and its lesser-known neighbor Pouilly-Fumé offer dry, mineral expressions of the Sauvignon Blanc grape. Loire Valley Sauvignon Blanc delivers lovely notes of lemon zest, grapefruit and fresh herbs. Ambitious producers in both Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé will often highlight their region's unique soils by bottling single-vineyard expressions.

WHITE BORDEAUX

The dry white wines of Bordeaux are typically blends of Sauvignon Blanc and Sémillon that age for some time in oak barrels before being bottled. Sémillon lends body, texture and a honeyed richness to the bright, grassy flavors of Sauvignon Blanc. Aging in French oak introduces notes of vanilla and toast to these already complex, flavorful whites. Delicious when young, the best examples can improve for many years in bottle. The commune of Pessac-Léognan, within the Graves region on Bordeaux's Left Bank, is especially prized for its gravelly soils and long-lived wines of both colors.

ALSACE

Alsace occupies the northeastern corner of France where the Rhône River marks the border between France and Germany. The food, architecture and wine traditions reflect both cultures. Alsace specializes in distinctive white wines that burst with flavor and complexity. Alsatian Riesling is usually dry with bright notes of ripe peach and lime. Pinot Gris is smooth and silky offering poached pear and ginger. Gewurztraminer is the richest and most aromatic style with telltale notes of lychee, rose water and honeysuckle.

WHITE WINES - FRANCE

RHÔNE VALLEY

The white wines of the Rhône Valley represent a small portion of the region's output but are among the most singular and rewarding amongst French whites. Condrieu showcases the Viogner grape in all its floral glory. The wines are dry but offer classic notes of apricot and orange blossom. The white wines from the historic hill of Hermitage, along with those from Crozes-Hermitage, Saint-Joseph and Saint-Peray, are based on Marsanne and Roussanne grapes. Also rich in texture but with flavors of quince, marzipan and nougat. Châteauneuf-du-Pape is well-known as a red wine but the whites are not to be missed! The blends vary from one producer to the next but they are always perfumed, silky and rich.

CHABLIS

The vineyards of Chablis occupy the northern reaches of France's Burgundy region. Chablis is without exception a white wine composed exclusively from the Chardonnay grape. Unlike the ripe, full-bodied styles of Chardonnay found throughout the wine world, and especially in the popular examples from California, Chardonnay in Chablis is delicate, mineral, and displays a distinct chalkiness to complement its green apple and lemon flavors. Those that come from Premier Cru (1er), and especially Grand Cru designated vineyards, offer the most complex, layered and age-worthy examples of Chablis.

WHITE BURGUNDY

The Côte de Beaune portion of Burgundy produces many of the world's most pedigreed white wines. In the villages of Meursault, Puligny-Montrachet and Chassagne-Montrachet, the Chardonnay grape achieves remarkable balance producing wines that are nervy, powerful and precise. In their youth, they display classic notes of crisp orchard fruits, lemon and crushed rock. As the wines age, they develop more honeyed, nutty accents but always maintain their mineral core. Wines carrying the superior designation of Premier (1er) Cru offer greater intensity and focus. At the top of the pyramid are the Grand Cru wines produced in small amounts from hallowed vineyard sites. Practically immortal in their aging potential, their brilliance and majesty is also evident in youth. Wines from Corton-Charlemagne, Chevalier-Montrachet, Bâtard-Montrachet, and, rarest of them all, Montrachet itself, represent the apex of what is possible with white wine.

WHITE WINES - ITALY

Unique white wines are produced all throughout Italy from indigenous grapes that capture local flavor and identity. Northern Italy offers a diverse mix of crisp, pure whites including Arneis and Gavi from Piemonte, Pinot Grigio and Ribolla from Friuli, and white blends that combine multiple grape varieties for added complexity. In Central Italy we find light, food-friendly whites such as Trebbiano and Verdicchio alongside more full-bodied, oak-aged examples. In Southern Italy, the island of Sicily is home to the earthy, mineral whites of Mount Etna while Sardegna produces fresh, charming Vermentino.

WHITE WINES - SPAIN

Spanish white wines, like those from France and Italy, vary enormously depending on the region, the grape variety, and the age of the wine. In Rioja, some of the greatest whites are aged for decades in old oak casks to develop nutty complexity. Priorat fashions unique white blends from grapes as varied as Chardonnay, Xarel-lo and Viognier. The fleshy Godello grape shines in the wines of Bierzo. But no Spanish white has gained more international acclaim than Albariño from Galicia in northwestern Spain. These lovely, vibrant wines typically offer lime-like dryness with enticing flavors of green apple, nectarine and orange blossom.

WHITE WINES - GERMANY

At one point in history, the white wines of Germany were reserved for nobility and commanded higher prices than those from any other winegrowing area. While quality has only improved from there, today the wines represent exceptional value. No grape tells the story of German wine more acutely than Riesling. Whether completely dry, off-dry or lusciously sweet, there is a great bottle of Riesling for every occasion and dish. Due to its racy minerality, German Riesling is often complemented by a touch of sweetness (as in most Kabinett and Spätlese styles). Today, completely dry versions (labeled Trocken or GG) are equally popular. Germany also produces excellent Chardonnay, Pinot Blanc (Weissburgunder) and Muscat (Muskateller).

WHITE WINES - AUSTRIA

Austria is famous for its pure, mineral white wines. Though excellent red wines are also produced, it is zesty Grüner Veltliner and aromatic Riesling that best capture the vinous story of this historic wine region. Grüner Veltliner is indigenous to Austria and offers a bright, refreshing sipper to accompany salads, seafood and mild cheeses. Richer, more full-bodied expressions are labeled Smaragd and offer greater complexity along with a spicy, honeyed character. Austrian Riesling is typically dry but can be off-dry or even sweet.

UNIQUE WHITES

American winemakers produce countless white wines of distinction that are too often left undiscovered in the face of well-known favorites like Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc. From bold, aromatic California Viognier to dry, nervy New York Riesling, there is a wine for every palette, preference, and mood. The following is a selection of domestic whites that are unique either for the grape variety showcased, the blend, the region, or the winemaker's approach. While no two of these wines are the same, they all promise a delicious and memorable drinking experience.

SAUVIGNON BLANC

Sauvignon Blanc thrives in the sunny vineyards of California from Napa and Sonoma in the north, to Santa Barbara in the south. California Sauvignon Blanc is invariably dry with zesty notes of tropical fruit, grapefruit and freshly chopped herbs. Depending on the producer, the style of the wine can vary from crisp and light, to richer, creamier expressions that are often aged in oak barrels. Some producers blend Sauvignon Blanc with the fleshy Sémillon grape as a nod to the white wines from Bordeaux.

CHARDONNAY

Chardonnay is the most well-traveled of all white wine grapes, thriving in regions all over the world from Germany to New Zealand. Aside from its natural home in France, Chardonnay has found its most popular expression in the United States and especially in the sunny vineyards of California. Styles vary based on the producer but the classic example of California Chardonnay is full-bodied, fruit-forward and oak-aged with notes of ripe apple, creamy butter and baking spices.

WHITE WINES - SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE

White wines from South America offer the wine lover a true opportunity for discovery. Cool and coastal Chile excels in many styles especially grassy, tropical Sauvignon Blanc. Argentina produces aromatic, dry Torrontés and elegant, oak-aged Chardonnay from high-altitude vineyards in the shadow of the imposing Andes. New Zealand Sauvignon Blanc is an international celebrity thanks to its bright flavors and thirst-quenching freshness; however, Chardonnay from the country, along with those from Australia, are an insider's secret. Australian Riesling is a true specialty. Typically, they are completely dry but bursting with citrus flavors. South Africa thrives with Steen, aka Chenin Blanc. These wines offer a lovely combination of richness and cut.

ROSÉ WINES

Rosé wine begins with dark-skinned grape varieties. The juice of these grapes, which is clear, macerates with the pigmented skins for long enough to develop a pink color but short enough to avoid becoming a red wine. Rosé production is serious business in the South of France where winemakers in Provence produce brilliant expressions ranging from light and refreshing to serious and even age-worthy. Provence rosé often employs grapes such as Grenache, Syrah and Cinsault. Winemakers throughout California often take the experimental route crafting delicious rosé from grapes as varied as Pinot Noir and Cabernet Sauvignon.

BURGUNDY

The red wines of Burgundy are fashioned from Pinot Noir, a finicky grape that is second to none in its ability to convey "terroir" – a French term suggesting a wine's sense of place. The Côte d'Or, a limestone hillside that plays host to the region's greatest vineyards, runs south from the city of Dijon and is dotted with prestigious wine villages. These include: Gevrey-Chambertin, Chambolle-Musigny, Vosne-Romanée, Beaune, Pommard and Volnay. First defined by Benedictine and Cistercian monks over 2,000 years ago, the vineyard classification of Burgundy remains largely unchanged today. Superior vineyards are designated as Premier (1er) Cru while the rarest and longest-lived wines come from Grand Cru vineyards. Some of the most famous Burgundy Grand Crus for red wine include Chambertin, Musigny, Bonnes-Mares, Romanée-Conti, La Tache, Richebourg, Échezeaux and Corton. Red Burgundy delights in its youth with vibrant red fruit infused with earth and mineral accents. Properly aged Burgundy can offer a truly profound vinous experience.

BEAUJOLAIS

Technically located in the Rhône département but considered part of Greater Burgundy, Beaujolais has an identity, tradition, and grape variety that are all its own. Though some white wine is produced, the region is internationally recognized for its vibrant red wines produced from the Gamay grape. Classic Beaujolais is pale in color, light to medium-bodied, and dry despite radiating with red fruit aromas and flavors. Many of the greatest examples come from one of ten superior villages designated as "Crus." In the glass, wines from the Crus of Morgon and Moulin-à-Vent often demonstrate greater intensity and richness of fruit while Fleurie and Brouilly produce fragrant, delicate expressions of Beaujolais.

RHÔNE VALLEY

The Rhône Valley offers wines of true character that could come from no other place in the world. The area is divided, geographically and stylistically, into Northern and Southern sectors but the general profile of Rhône wine is embodied by the overarching Côtes-du-Rhône category. These wines drink beautifully in their youth and offer excellent value. The Northern Rhône specializes in Syrah with the best examples coming from steep slopes of granite overlooking the Rhône River. Classic Northern Rhône Syrah is medium-bodied with intoxicating notes of violet, black pepper, and barbecue smoke. The subregions of Côte-Rôtie, Cornas and Hermitage are recognized for wines of exceptional quality. Southern Rhône reds are usually blends focused on Grenache. The historic vineyards of Châteauneuf-du-Pape host ancient Grenache vines and produce robust reds bursting with raspberry, fig, licorice and Herbes de Provence flavors.

BORDEAUX

RED WINES - ITALY

Though red wines of character are produced throughout every corner of Italy, no two regions share the same tradition or offer the same style of wine. That said, Italian reds as a whole tend towards aromatic, savory, structured, and fresh: all of which make them ideal companions for food. In the north, Nebbiolo stands alone in the fragrant, ethereal wines of Barolo and Barbaresco in Piedmont. As a testament to Nebbiolo's purity and transparency, these wines are often bottled as single vineyards or "crus" with the best withstanding many decades of bottle age. Amarone is the richly flavored red wine of the Veneto and is made from the juice of air-dried grapes. Sangiovese thrives along the sunny Mediterranean coast of Tuscany where traditional wines such as Chianti and Brunello di Montalcino are joined by modern, experimental styles deemed "Super Tuscans." Southern Italy offers a variety of delicious reds from earthy, elegant Etna Rosso on Sicily, to dark, powerful Aglianico from Campania. Simply put, the grape vine loves Italy! Perhaps that is why the Greeks first referred to Italy as Oenotria, "The Land of Wine." Salute!

RED WINES - SPAIN

Spain offers a myriad of red wine styles from every corner of the country. To many, Spanish wine is synonymous with Tempranillo, the main variety in the iconic wines of Rioja. Traditional Rioja is aged for several years in oak barrels mellowing its flavors and developing great complexity. Older examples show a tawny color and offer glorious notes of red cherry, forest floor and baking spices. Bolder, fleshier styles of Tempranillo can be found further south in Ribera del Duero and in Toro. The red wines of Bierzo emphasize the Mencía grape and are much admired for their purity, freshness and versatility. Priorat lies just outside Barcelona and has gained considerable attention in recent decades. Grenache informs most Priorat blends and due to the grape's versatility, styles produced can range from bright and fruity to dark, concentrated, and powerful. In short, Spanish reds offer it all: variety, quality, character and value. It's hard to go wrong!

PINOT NOIR

The delicate Pinot Noir grape comes from Burgundy, France but has prospered enormously in the vineyards of Oregon and California. The wines possess lovely red fruit character ranging from fresh strawberry to stewed cherry along with subtle spices from oak. Some producers offer pale-colored, elegant versions that demonstrate the nuances of vineyard and vintage. Others produce fuller, darker examples that hold up to heartier dishes. Regardless of style, high quality Pinot Noir today is being produced as far north as Oregon's Willamette Valley and as far south as Santa Barbara County. Generally speaking, Oregon's cool climate offers more restrained styles of Pinot Noir that bridge French earthiness with California ripeness.

Grenache is a versatile variety that balances freshness with power and showcases notes of stewed fruit, cocoa and spice. It is often blended with Syrah and Mourvèdre to create "GSM" blends, a practice and tradition that traces its roots to the Rhône Valley of France. Syrah is celebrated for its uniquely spicy, smoky nuances. In addition to vivid fruit flavors, the wines often feature notes of black pepper, violet and smoked meat making them ideal companions for beef and lamb. Cooler climates, like that of Santa Barbara, emphasize the savory, fragrant side of Syrah. Warmer climates, such as Napa Valley and Paso Robles, yield darker, bolder expressions.

Merlot and Cabernet Franc hail from western France where, alongside Cabernet Sauvignon, they inform the world famous red blends of Bordeaux. All three varieties have proven successful in vineyards throughout the world but they particularly thrive in California. Merlot offers plush dark fruit while Franc demonstrates its hallmark notes of fresh flowers and herbs. Zinfandel has enjoyed a long history in California as evidenced by precious vineyards of old, gnarled vines. These heritage vines stand in defiance of mother nature, and consumer trends, producing some of the state's most exciting and flavorful wines. Zinfandel often features jammy fruit framed with seductive spice.

UNIQUE REDS

American winemakers produce countless red wines of distinction that are too often left undiscovered in the face of well-known favorites like Pinot Noir and Cabernet Sauvignon. The following is a selection of domestic reds that are unique either for the grape variety showcased, the blend, the region, or the winemaker's approach. While no two of these wines are the same, they all promise a memorable drinking experience.

CABERNET SAUVIGNON

The Cabernet Sauvignon variety comes from Bordeaux, France but has proven successful in vineyards throughout the world; however, no region has developed an identity so closely linked to the grape as California, and specifically the Napa Valley. Napa's various climates, terrains, and soil types serve to bring forth all of Cabernet's dimensions. The classic style of California Cabernet offers an earthy edge with leather and tobacco notes complementing ripe fruit. Modern expressions are bold, layered and richly fruited with impressions of fine, toasted oak. Some wines have developed cult status due to their high quality, limited production and worldwide demand.

PROPRIETARY BLENDS

Inspired by the world-renowned red blends of Bordeaux, France, winemakers in the United States will often complement Cabernet Sauvignon with its companion varieties: Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Petit Verdot and Malbec. Blended in the right amounts these grapes can lend flesh, florality and additional complexity to the dark fruit flavors and powerful structure of Cabernet Sauvignon. Some of the most iconic wines in this category include Opus One, Dominus Estate, Joseph Phelp's Insignia and the Ridge Monte Bello.

RED WINES - SOUTH AMERICA

The grape vine was brought to South America by the Spanish nearly five centuries ago. The unique climate, terrain and geology of this land, heavily influenced by the Andes, proved ideal for hearty red varieties (mostly French). In more recent history, a combination of quality value wines as well as highly-rated prestige offerings exposed South American wine to international markets. Chile is often associated with the darkly colored and herbaceous Carménère while Argentina is all-but-synonymous with fruit-forward Malbec. Equally successful are Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Syrah and proprietary blends thereof.

RED WINES - SOUTH AFRICA

In recent history, no wine-producing country has reinvented itself so dramatically, and with such astounding results, as South Africa. The end of Apartheid in 1994 ushered in a new wave of ambitious winemakers eager to explore the potential of this ancient and picturesque land. With one foot planted in the Old World and one in the New, the wines today offer something for every palate. Most producers are focusing on recognizable grapes such as Cabernet Sauvignon, Syrah/Shiraz, and Merlot. These varieties often complement one another in bold, flavorful blends that are released under proprietary names. Many of the best examples come from the prestigious regions of Stellenbosch, Paarl, and the Swartland. South Africa's red wine specialty is Pinotage, a dark-colored wine with notes of chocolate-covered cherry, ground pepper and dried herbs.

RED WINES - AUSTRALIA

Australia today offers some of the most exciting, dynamic wines from anywhere in the world. The country's greatest resource is its wealth of old vines – some having survived 180 vintages! Bold, flavorful Shiraz from ancient vines of the Barossa Valley is what first introduced the world to Australian wine. Today that style is joined by more restrained expressions from a variety of regions. Margaret River, in Western Australia, produces elegant, sophisticated Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and red blends. Cool-climate areas such as the Yarra Valley and Tasmania offer world-class Pinot Noir. Grenache, whether varietal or as part of GSM blends, is one of Australia's great wine treasures. Please note that screw caps are a reliable and commonly used closure in the Australian wine industry and in no way reflect the quality of the wine inside the bottle.

NEW ZEALAND

Such is the popularity of New Zealand Sauvignon Blanc that few have yet to discover the country's brilliant, meticulously crafted red wines. Pinot Noir is New Zealand's star red variety excelling in areas as widespread as Auckland, Martinborough, Canterbury and Central Otago. Bright, pure and bursting with flavor, New Zealand Pinot Noir reflects the sunshine, soil, and oceanic influence so unique to this island nation. Syrah, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot excel in the vineyards of Hawke's Bay where dedicated winemakers are producing world-class examples. Please note that screw caps are a reliable and commonly used closure in the New Zealand wine industry and in no way reflect the quality of the wine inside the bottle.

DESSERT WINES

BY THE BOTTLE

Due to their unrivaled quality, character and rarity, sweet wines were once the exclusive pleasure of royalty. Today these oft forgotten nectars also offer tremendous value. Whether as an accompaniment to dessert, cheese, or even spicy and savory dishes, sweet wines help transcend the culinary experience. Many of the finest examples come from ideally situated vineyards where dedicated winemakers uphold centuries-old traditions. Sauternes and Barsac are the golden treasures of Bordeaux. They are produced from grapes concentrated by botrytis, a noble rot that results in dazzling flavors of honey, ginger and marmalade. Germany and Austria offer brilliant sweet wines from grapes picked at various levels of ripeness. Trockenbeerenauslese (abbreviated TBA) is the rarest and sweetest of these elixirs. Tokaji, a late-harvest wine steeped in history and produced in miniscule quantities, is the pride of Hungary. Due to their sugar content and high acidity, sweet wines can age for many decades turning from golden yellow to a dark mahogany.

FORTIFIED WINES

BY THE BOTTLE

Fortified wines find their origin in history. The need to transport wine without spoilage was resolved by the addition of grape spirit (essentially brandy). This "fortification" allowed the wine to survive long voyages by sea until reaching its target port. Produced from both white and red grapes, fortified wines range from utterly dry to syrupy sweet. Sherry comes from Jerez in southern Spain. Fino and manzanilla are dry styles of white sherry best matched with seafood. Amontillado, palo cortado and oloroso age for many years in oak barrels. Often dry, these styles shine with cured meats and hard cheeses. Port, from the Douro Valley, and madeira, from the island of the same name, are historic fortified wines of Portugal. Practically immortal, the best examples can be kept for centuries!
